Kerr provides all course materials.

This lecture will review the current concepts of contemporary endodontics and provide a hands-on experience to learn the techniques to manage endodontic treatment from access to restoration. With a comprehensive lecture and hands-on experience, this course will discuss the changes toward a contemporary and restoratively-driven approach to endodontic treatment, and it will introduce the concept of modern instrumentation and obturation using the heat-treated endodontic instruments and bioceramic obturation.

Learning Objectives:

At the completion of this workshop participants will:

- Review key concepts of endodontic diagnosis and treatment planning
- Understand the approach for restoratively-driven access design
- Learn how to use contemporary controlled-memory files for conservative instrumentation
- Apply bioceramic and modern technology into root canal obturation techniques

Presented by: Dr. Stephanie Tran

Dr. Stephanie Tran is an endodontist who is passionate about patient-centered care to help patients maintain their teeth, and about endodontic education to help her colleagues keep elevating the profession.
